Plumetty (Fur, 5) 2.19

Neutral fur. Sometimes blazoned “potenty.” Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “potent tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

The argent and azure variation was used routinely in period armory, while other color combinations were rare.

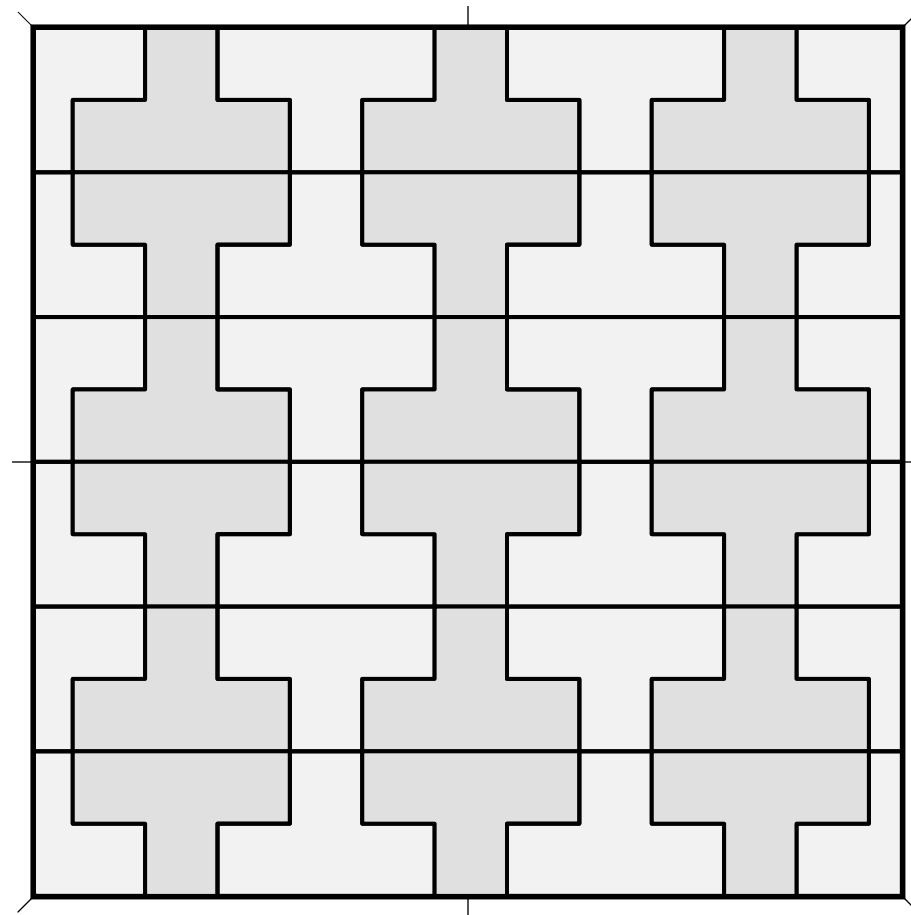

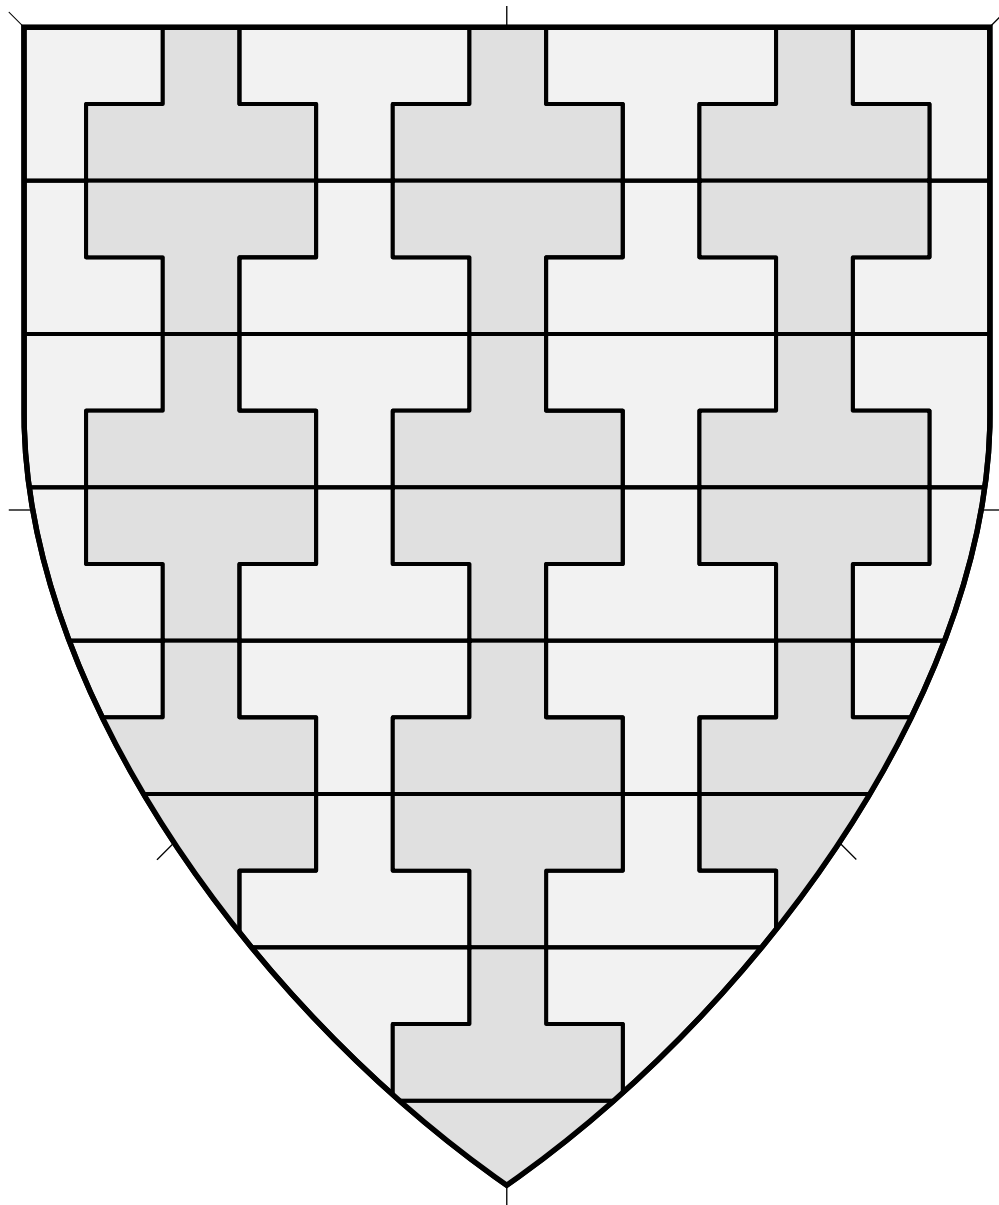

Potent (1) 2.20

Neutral fur. Sometimes blazoned “potenty.” Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “potent tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

This variation with the potents lined up below one another was later blazoned “potent in pale,” but within the SCA it is not blazoned differently. Very rare in period armory.

Potent (2) 2.21

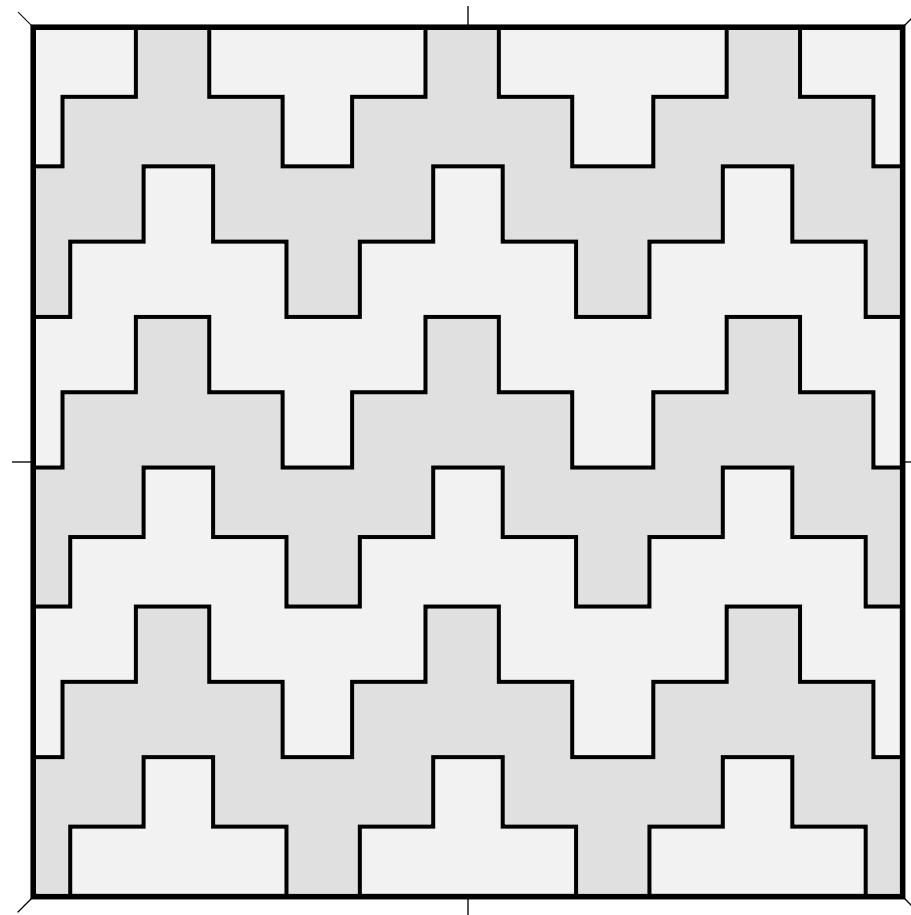

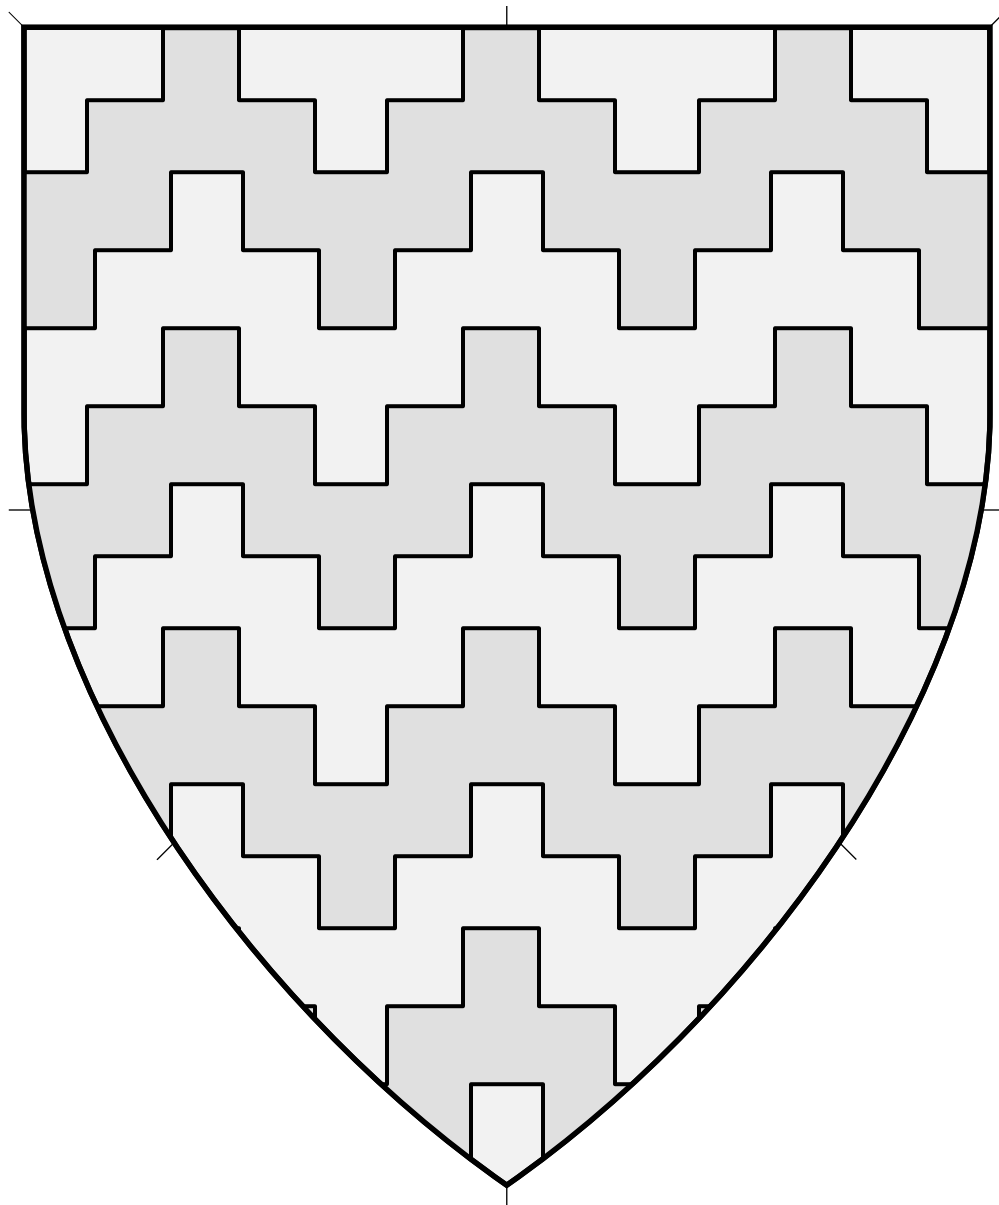

Neutral fur. Sometimes blazoned “potent counter-potent,” or just “counter-potent.”

Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “potent counter-potent tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

Rare in period armory.

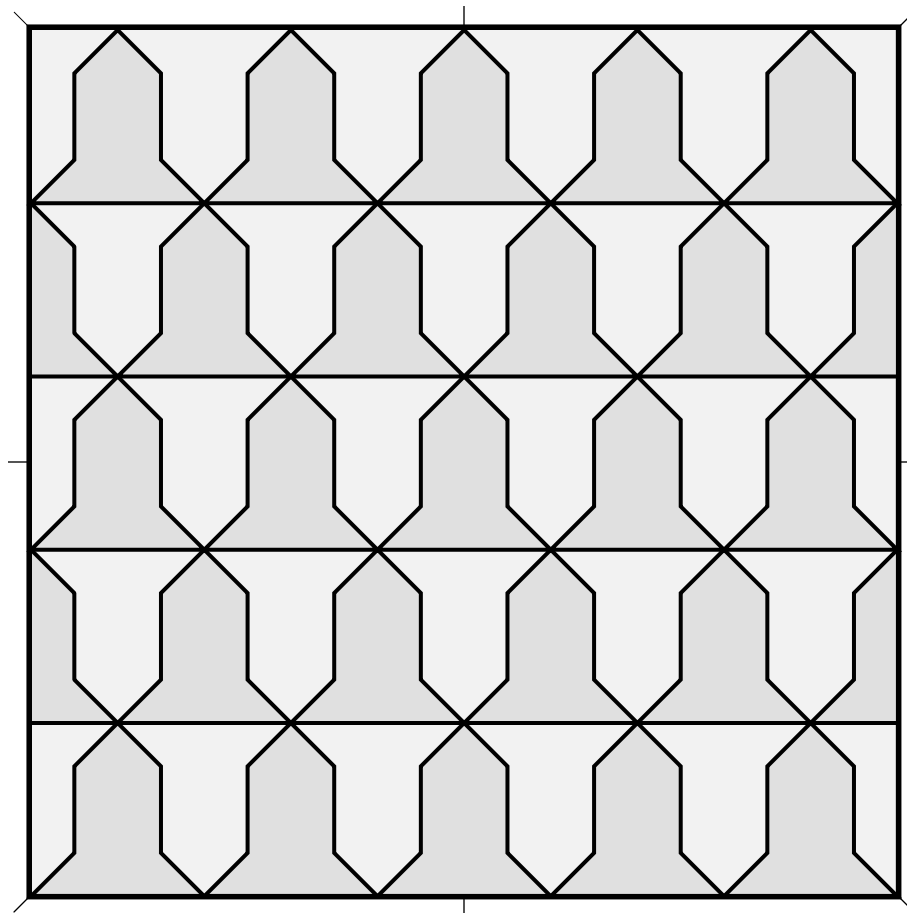

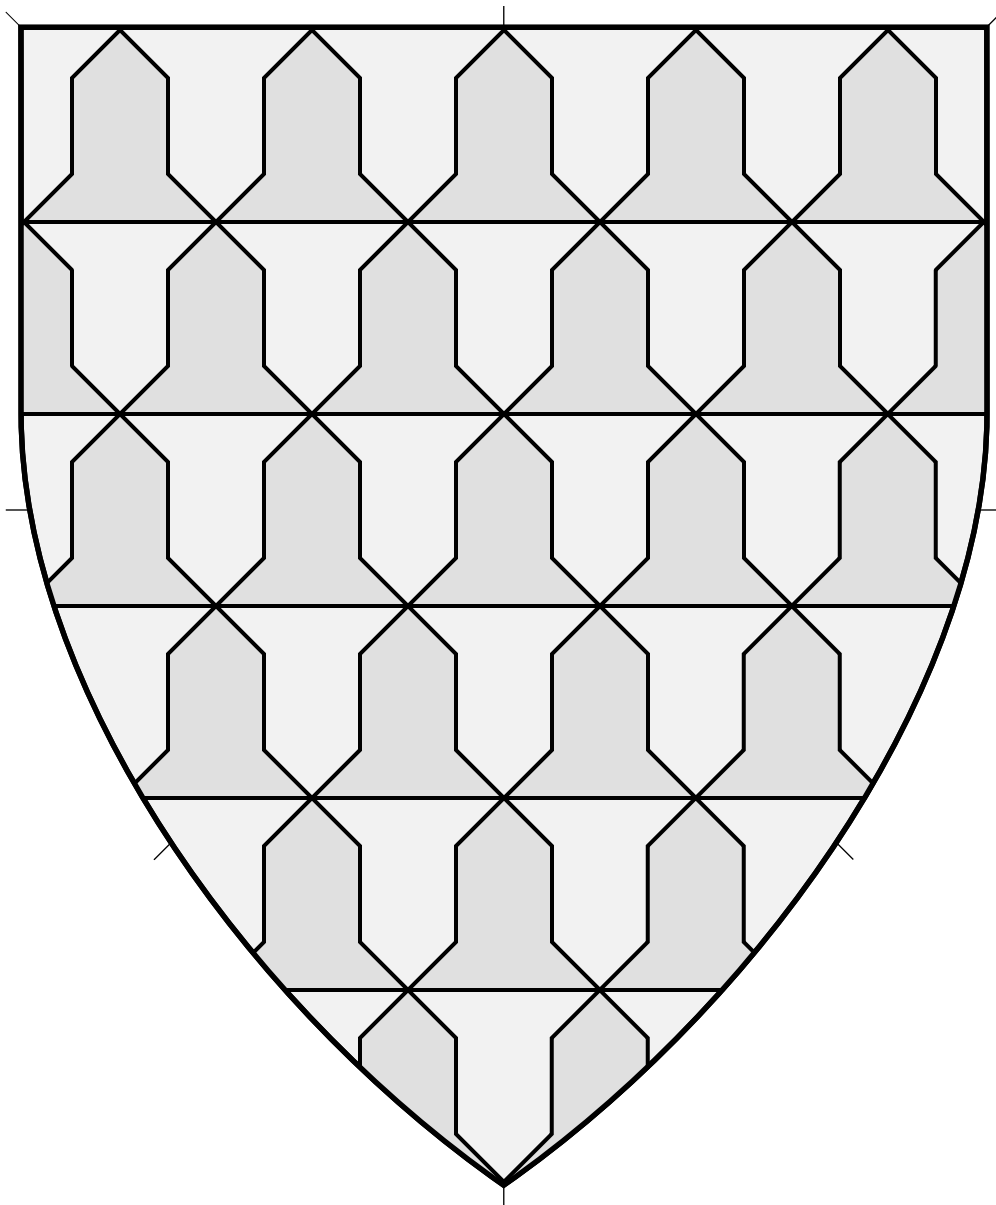

Potent Counter-potent 2.22

Neutral fur. Sometimes blazoned “potency en point.” Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “potency en point tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

Very rare in period armory.

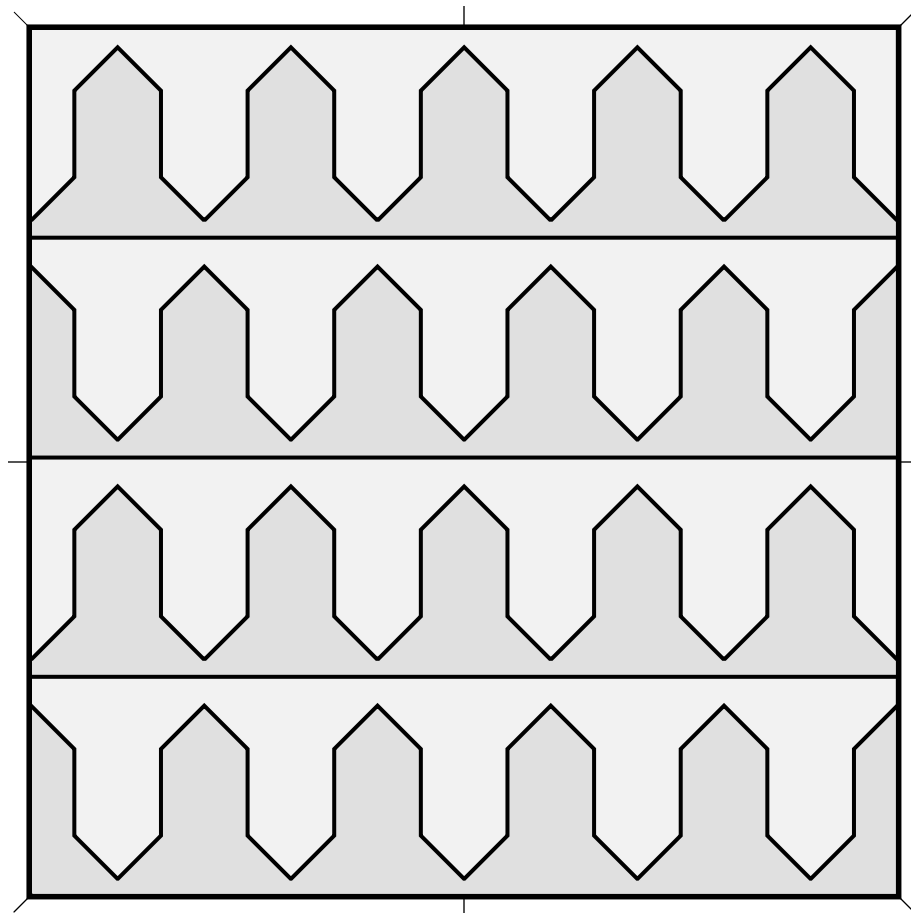

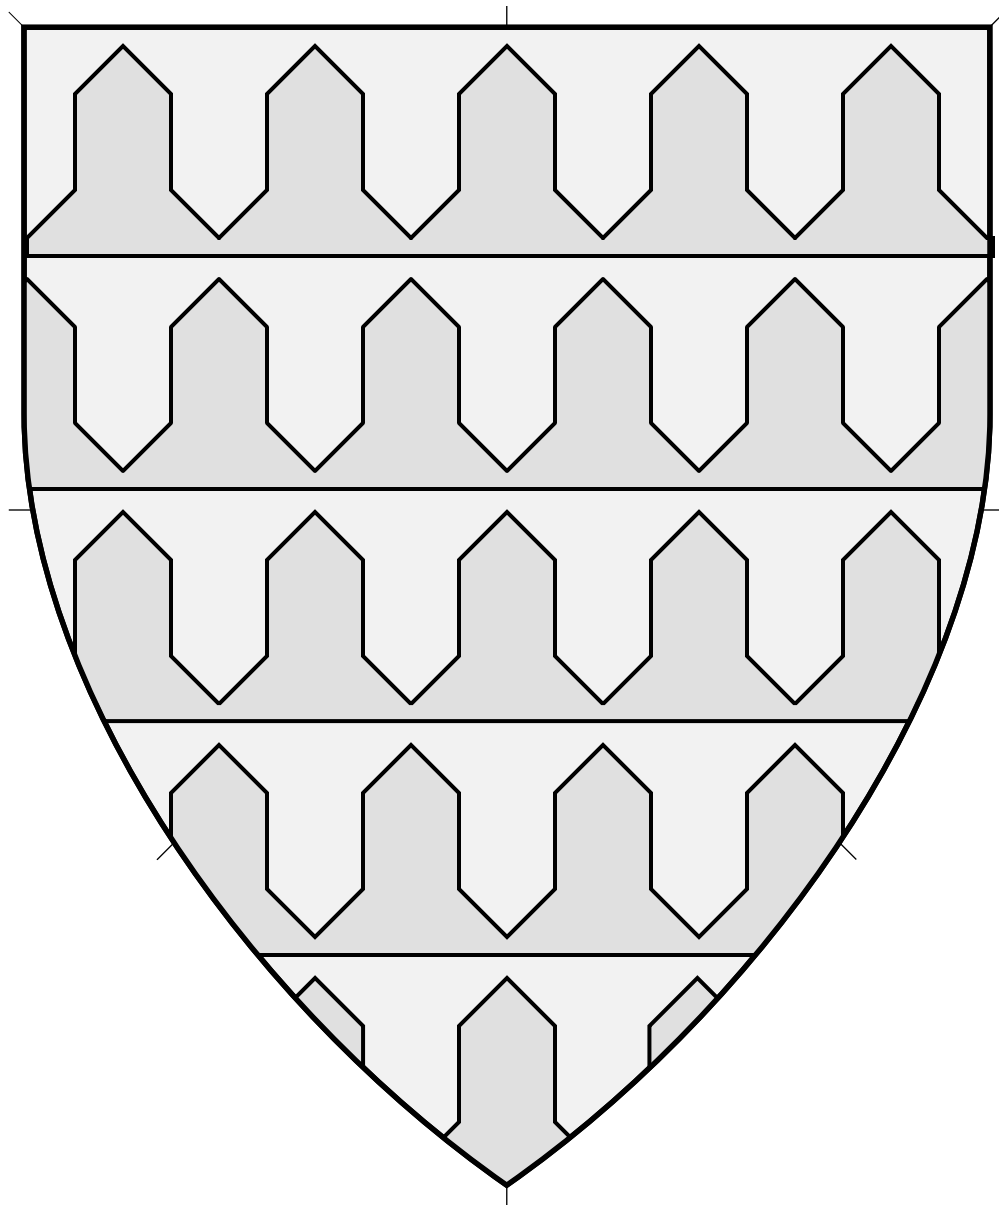

Potent En Point 2.23

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

The argent and azure variation was used routinely in period armory, while other color combinations were rare.

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

The argent and azure variation was used routinely in period armory, while other color combinations were rare.

This variation with curved edges is an earlier style; this was later blazoned “vair ancien,” but during our period it was merely an artistic variation of vair, so within the SCA it is not blazoned differently.

Vair (4) 2.27

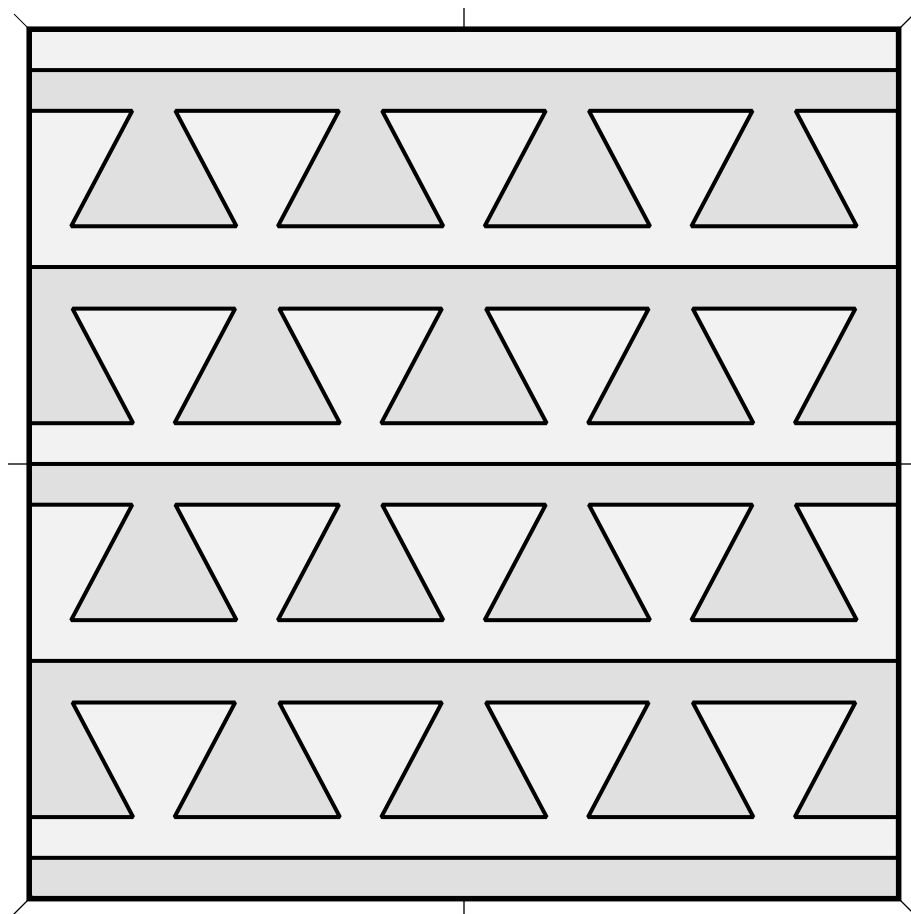

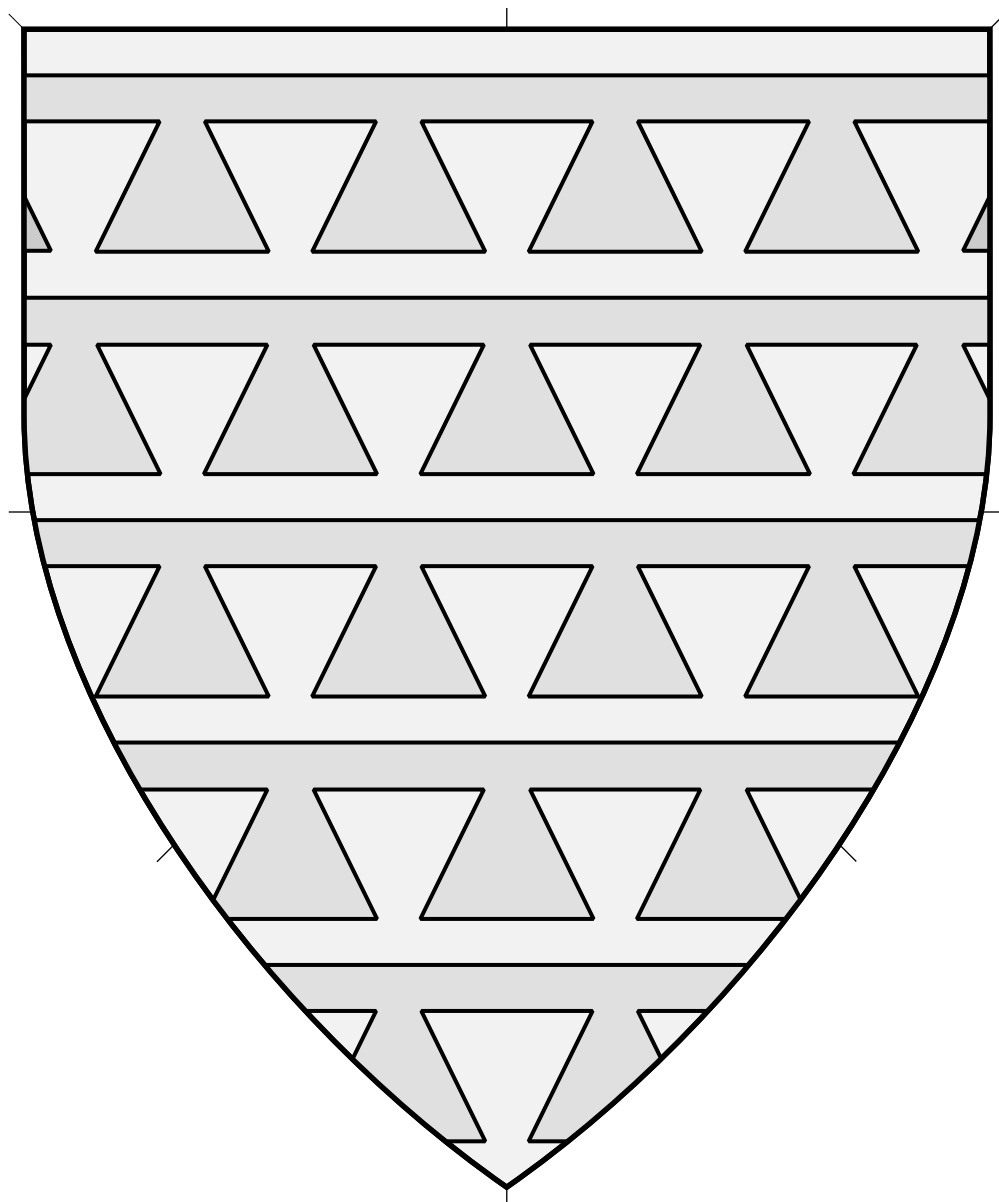

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

The argent and azure variation was used routinely in period armory, while other color combinations were rare.

This variation with the vair bells lined up below one another was later blazoned “vair in pale,” but during our period it was merely an artistic variation of vair, so within the SCA it is not blazoned differently.

Vair (5) 2.28

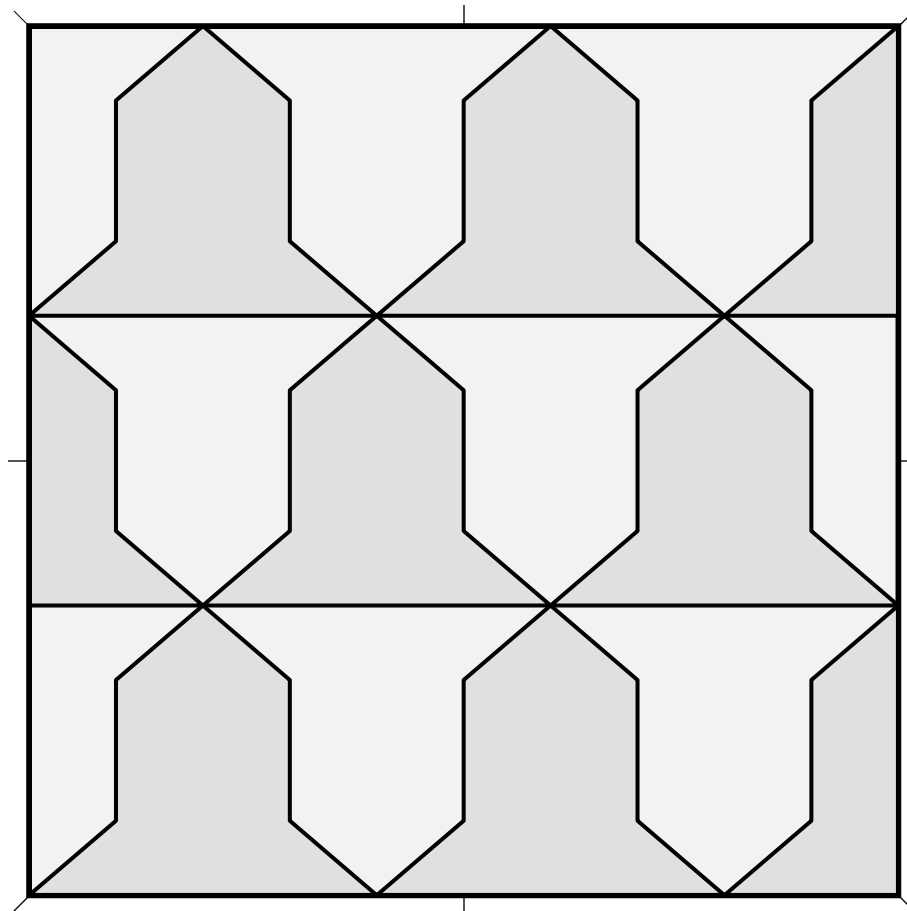

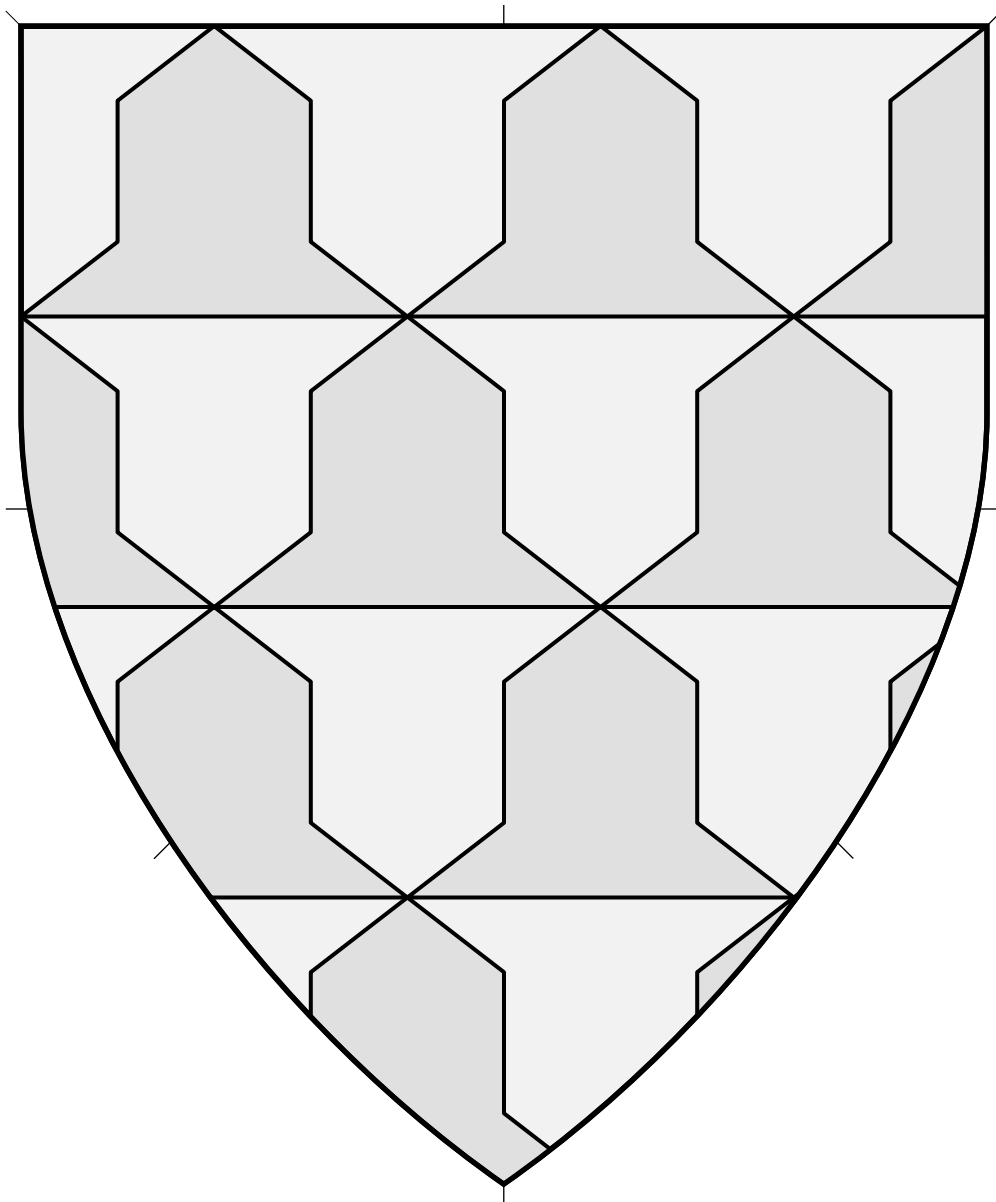

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

 “counter-vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.
 Rare in period armory.

Vair Counter-vair (1)  2.37

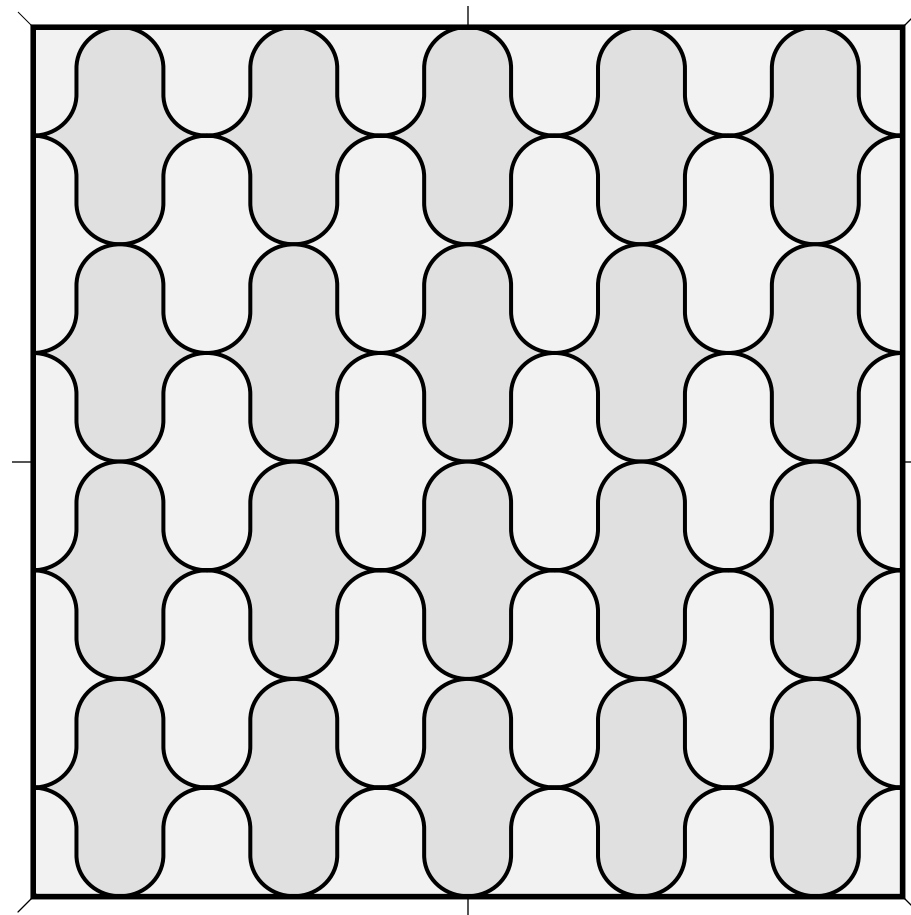

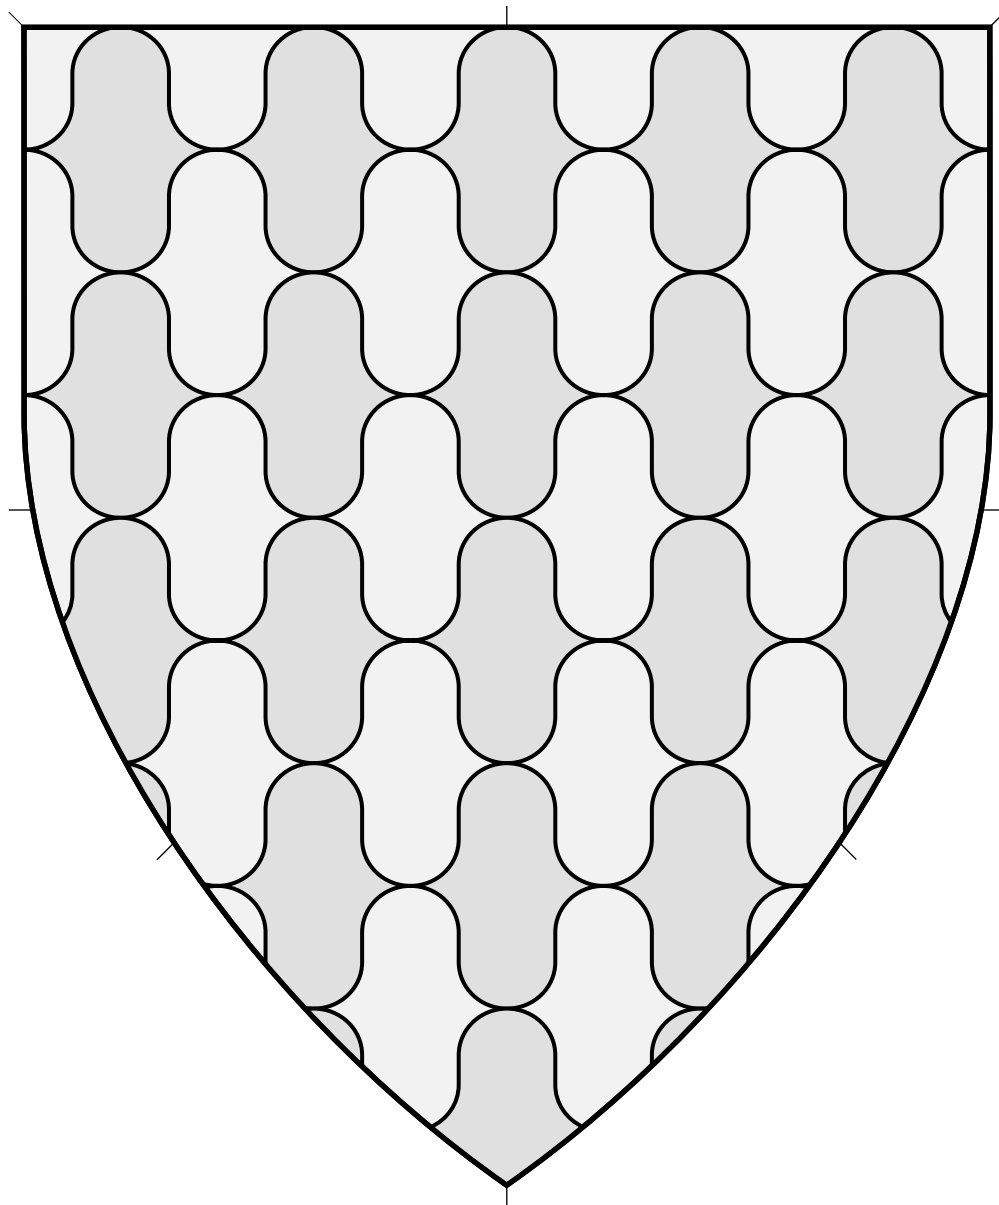

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “counter-vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.

This variation with curved edges is an earlier style, sometimes called “vair ancien”, but not blazoned differently in the SCA.

Curvy vair dates from the 12/13th century, while counter-vair appears in the 16/17th century, so the combination may not be registrable.

Vair Counter-vair (2) 2.38

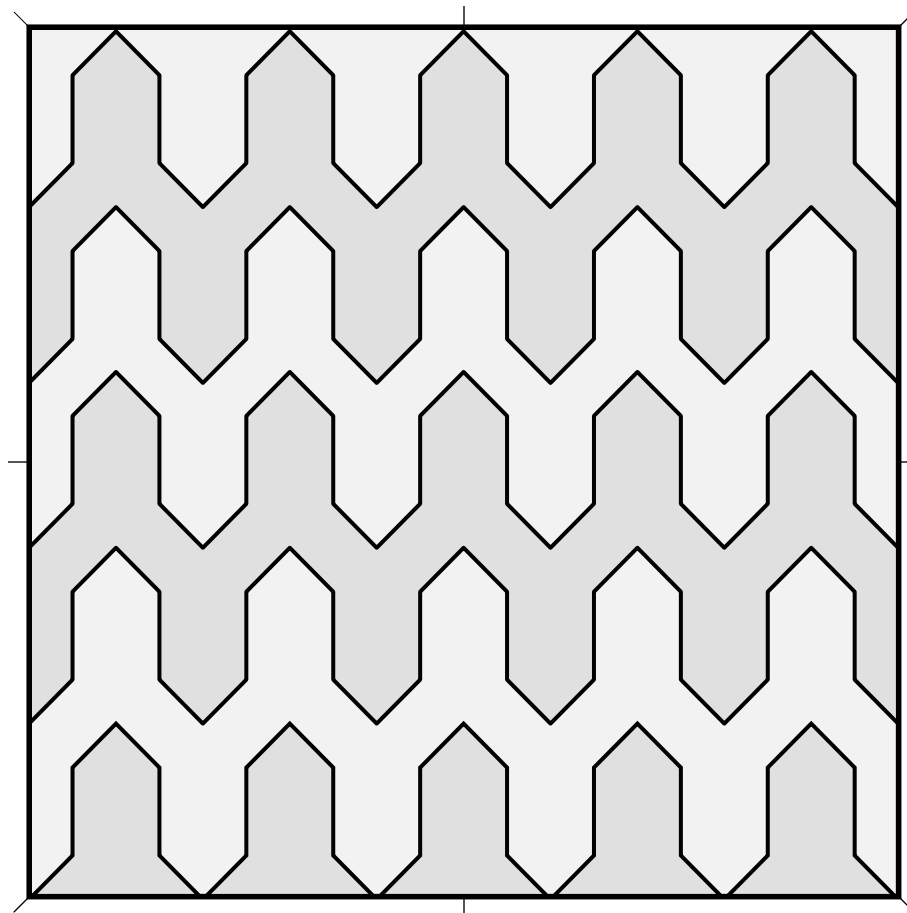

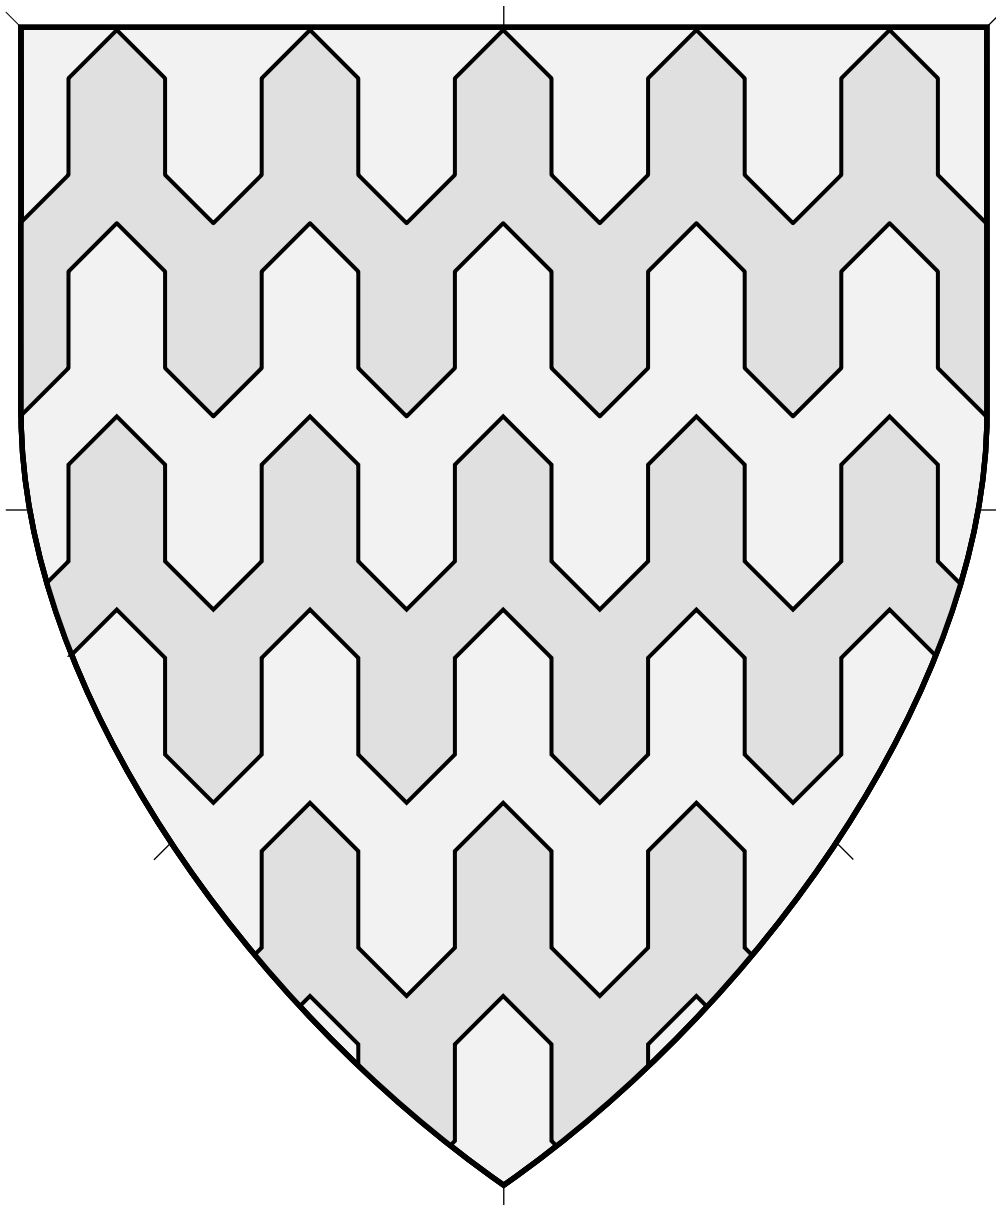

Neutral fur. Tinctured argent and azure, unless explicitly blazoned as “counter-vairy tincture and tincture” with any two contrasting tinctures.
